

I categorically oppose deregulation as proposed, and discussed by Chairman Powell on National Public Radio today, May 30, 2003. Despite allegations that market forces will offer sufficient protection of Constitutional guarantees, there is simply no case offered to support this claim. Market forces serve shareholders, majority populations and the lowest and least common denominator. Did market forces end slavery? Did market forces enfranchise women? Did market forces advance civil rights? To claim so would be laughable, were the stakes not so high. It is a sad commentary that the uncivil processes currently underway so severely truncate common, accepted, and EXPECTED Constitutional rights, that the only way to prosecute such an agenda is to do so in a virtual media blackout (NPR notwithstanding) and to callously ignore the spirit of voluminous, grassroots public commentary. See you in Court, sir. The PEOPLE will not be silenced.
